Governor Harmon Unmasks

Distrust of the people seems to be one of Governor Harmon's strong points. Like President Taft, he seems to think the people a mob, not capable of voting upon any proposition unless it is voting for bonds to their class that rules by underhand methods. He knows that party lines can be relied upon to divide the people and leave the interests secure; that a matter of public interest put up to the people on its merits, without political prejudice, will be rendered for the common good. Plutocracy understands that if all the common people don't. So does Mr. Harmon.

These are some of the deductions we feel constrained to make as a result of Judson Harmon address to the Constitutional convention at Columbus on the 8th, when he gave the initiative and referendum a slap and unexpectedly put one over for the brewers. His performance, by the way, reminds one of the performance of one Alton B. Parker, when he repudiated the platform on which he was nominated before it was cold. It doesn't take a very great stretch of the imagination to note the parallel. He repudiated by his speech the platform on which he was elected to the Governorship. Instead of being a "magnificent exhibition of manly courage," as one of his critics said, we think it a notice to the interests of the east that there is one candidate in the Democratic party that can be relied upon to stand between their exclusive melon patch and the people.

Hon. Martin B. Trainor, editor of the Greenville Democrat, a deep thinker, a broad gauge democrat and an admirer of Governor Harmon, who has been boosting the Governor on all occasions, is stunned. We quote a paragraph or two to show his state of mind:

"We are pained to learn of Governor Harmon's adverse criticism of initiative, referendum and the recall before the Constitutional convention. These policies are so simple that most any wayfarer on the side of the people could understand, and yet we do not wish to reflect upon the profound wisdom of our distinguished Governor.

"We are glad that the Constitutional convention dissents from the Governor. He made a great speech to the convention, but it is very cautious and very reserved. In this, ordinarily speaking, it is full of wisdom, but it is not in harmony with the progressive spirit of this age. He showed courage and clearly refutes the charge that he has no pronounced views on progressive measures. We await his courage on national issues before we make up our mind as to whether he should be trusted with the presidency of the United States, to deal with the trusts and the vested interests.

Mr. Trainor will wait a good while before he hears from Governor Harmon on the great questions before the American people beyond "a tariff for revenue only"—which is made to mean anything.

"Tepid Teddy"

Dr. Blount, the woman suffragist of Illinois, who practices her profession in Chicago but is honorably famous throughout the state, might be suspected of never having heard of "Terrible Teddy." She criticizes him as "tepid." But when you come to think about it, perhaps she did not choose her adjective lightly. For "Terrible Teddy" is a bit like the cold mince pie at the county fair, which the hawk sold for "hot" not because it was hot, for, of course, it wasn't, but because he explained to disappointed customers, "Hot" was the trade name of the goods. "Tepid" is truly a more faithful epithet for Theodore than "terrible." He did not terrorize the Wall-street gang who ran off with the Tennessee coal and iron plunder, even if he did make terrible faces at everybody who shouted at him to stop them. A little boy once went hunting with his father's shot gun. When he came home to dinner he told his mother in great excitement how he had seen an awful animal sitting upon its haunches on a rock in the woods; how this animal had long teeth, a pointed nose, and great big staring eyes; how its ears stood up straight and stiff, and how big black-and-yellow stripes ran along its little body to a tail that "stood up immense," and how it looked fiercely at him, the boy himself, as if getting ready for a terrible spring. But the boy wasn't scared. Not a bit. He raised his father's gun and blazed away at the awful animal, and he "fetched the beast, sure enough," and now its mangled body lay out on the stoop. The mother went out to look at her son's "terrible beast" and it was a chipmunk. The "Terrible Teddy" is good deal of a chipmunk, after all. Dr. Blount's adjective fits him best. He is "Tepid Teddy" when you look him in the eye.—The Public, Chicago.

Governor Wilson Balks on Recall

Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, fired the opening gun in his campaign for the democratic presidential nomination in Illinois in an address delivered before the Iroquois club by reiterating his belief in the initiative and referendum and predicting democratic victory at the polls in November.

Six hundred citizens attended the Chicago Lincoln birthday luncheon at which Governor Wilson was the guest of honor.

"I believe in the initiative and referendum because they will give the people real representative government," said Governor Wilson. "They are state and local questions and are designed to give the people the power in localities where special interests have obtained control of public affairs. I have never heard them suggested as a substitute for representative government. In fact, they will safeguard the people in preserving government wherever and whenever it is necessary."

An Offer That Involves no Money Risk if You Accept It

We are so positive that our remedy will completely relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish it free of all cost if it fails.

Constipation is commonly caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall's Orders on our guarantee. They are eaten like candy, and are particularly good for children. They seem to act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on the other organs. They do not purge or cause any other inconvenience. We will refund your money if they do not overcome chronic or habitual constipation and thus aid to relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments. Try Rexall's Orders at our risk. Three sizes, 10c, 25c, and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, Nungesser Drug Co., 102 S. Main street, Celina.

Why a Crusade Against a Single Disease?

Perhaps one may ask why such a crusade against a single disease? Other diseases are very prevalent, such as heart or kidney diseases, rheumatism, and more frequent than all, pneumonia.

There are several reasons for this. In the first place, there is no other disease which so habitually cuts down its victims in the best years of their lives. Many diseases only occur late in life and are called degenerative diseases, caused by worn-out organs. Pneumonia is most prevalent and fatal at the two extremes of life—before one's work is begun and when it is done.

In the second place, tuberculosis is an infectious or communicable disease, the cause of which we know, as well as its prevention. We know how to avoid it, to prevent it, to cure it.

Finally, it has a steady, continuous prevalence without intermission. Many contagious diseases come in epidemics and then cease; tuberculosis never ceases.
